Harlequin Series romance lines are published in print and digital formats and sold around the world. Each series publishes a set number of new books each month, similar to a magazine cycle. For example, Harlequin Presents publishes eight books per month, and Harlequin Romantic Suspense publishes four books per month.

Series romance novels, also known as “category romance”, are inspired by classic romance tropes, such as friends to lovers, second chances or secret babies. Ranging from sexy to sweet, suspenseful to historical, each series offers a consistent and unique reading promise and guarantees a happy ending in every love story.

carina press™

Carina Press, Harlequin's digital-first fiction imprint, publishes a broad range of romance, including contemporary, paranormal, historical, LGBTQIA, romantic suspense and more. Editors consider submissions between 25,000 words and 125,000 words for publication. New in 2020—Carina Adores is our trope-driven LGBTQ+ contemporary romance line with stories ranging from 60,000 to 80,000 words.
